

From Sir Chas W. Dilke, Bart. to Sir Selby Chis
76, Sloane Street, S.W.

Wentworth Place. 11. Aug. 95.

Dear Sir,

I have a note that there was a Wentworth House (and also a Wentworth Place) at Hampstead named from the Wentworth Place, so christened by my great-uncle with the name of his father, brother, nephew, all of whom were alive at the time.
I think that Miss Chester when she lived at the original Wentworth Place changed the name into Lane Bart. The account given of the whole matter in the first edition of Mr. Austin Forster's "Letters of John Keats to Fanny Branne", is 1878, was inaccurate in some points, and he was unaware that my great-uncle and a cousin yours, who had both lived at Wentworth Place in the time of Keats, were both alive when he wrote; and in the Appendix to the second edition, published in 1889, you will find all the facts accurately set forth.

Very truly,

Chas. V. Mike

H.C. Shelley & D